

Dear All,

Even as many of us have begun to feel a little more settled into the rhythms and patterns brought about by social isolation, our context is changing again. The initial flurry of resources generated to address the Covid-19 situation has subsided. Many communities are now considering transition to a new normal that allows at least a greater degree of on-site presence. Whilst issues are still pressing and require careful thought, the need for the kind of additional resources I have been distributing has lessened. Thus, this will be my last Covid-19 “extra”. I trust you have found these extras helpful and, of course, I am still available to provide assistance via e-mail should you wish to contact me.
